If the Chinese povernment were told that the price of gunnews beats to be employed in the suppression of purpovers the hearty co-operation of the Manpiracy was the hearty co-operation of the Mandaring in quelling and ruling the adjacent districts/ some good might be done. Otherwiss we should treat with the authority which we might find in possession; or if there were no such authority to raise one. Had this plan been pursued with regard to the West Constitute a different result would have eventuated to that which we now see! There would have been by this time a large commerce on that oxisting Coast, which would have proved a great pacificator. The Mandarins could enter on repossession whenever they might be able to establish their authority, but we should insist on the trade which might have sprung up, not being disturbed nor interferred What is it we ask, at the present moment which prevents trade from being carried into these devoctated and abandoned districts? Nothing whatever we reply but the fear of the Mandarins evoking Consular authority in case any of the craft so trading should fall into their clutches. We have seen from the Interest at 8 per cent per annum; 210,000.00 consequences might ensue.

Trade once established on the West Coast would croop and expand through all the districts we have named in a very few years. Policies of two Years' Standing.

The "situation" is most inexplicable. If the West Coast be kept a scaled book until the Mandarius recover it, they will assuredly eject foreigners should they success and if trade is not be carried on there so long as the pirates rale the roost they may rule it for ever.
